Secrets to get hired

Find Projects and Start Bidding

Competition can be fierce! You need to stand out

- Read the project description
- Include in your bid how your skillset can and will help with the project
- Don't be afraid to clarify things
- Keeping your bid short and sharp -- Keep in mind that, for a good project, the employer will have to sift through dozens or even hundreds of bids
- PROOFREAD - no matter how great a project, contest, inquiry, or suggestion is, a poorly written proposal suggests lack of interest and poor work habits
- Remember: Your first job will always be the hardest to get - PERSISTENCE IS KEY

Secrets to be Hired and Paid Well

Make sure you do the work well

Time Management

- Set yourself a schedule - having a routine to follow everyday will do wonders for your productivity.
- Pin down a time for work and for play, and you'll have no trouble reaching your project goals.
- Be mindful of overworking, and keep your work-life balance intact.

Stable Flow of Work

- “Feast-starve cycle” - freelance jobs aren't permanent so you run the risk of running out of work.
- Make the effort to stay on top of things.
- Always strive to do a great job with each project
- Build up your reputation. This will open you up to referrals and collaborations.
- Market yourself. Be active on social media, create a website and portfolio, and use your network.
- Get the word out and showcase what you can do.

Secrets to be Hired and Paid Well

Make sure you do the work well

Be Flexible

- Working in today's global economy means having to collaborate with people from different countries
- KEEP UP
- Early riser or nocturnal creature?
- Work with a schedule that's comfortable for you
- Clients will give you plus points when you try to work with their time zones
- Freelancing gives you the freedom to be able to work with your lifestyle, not around it

Secrets to be Hired and Paid Well

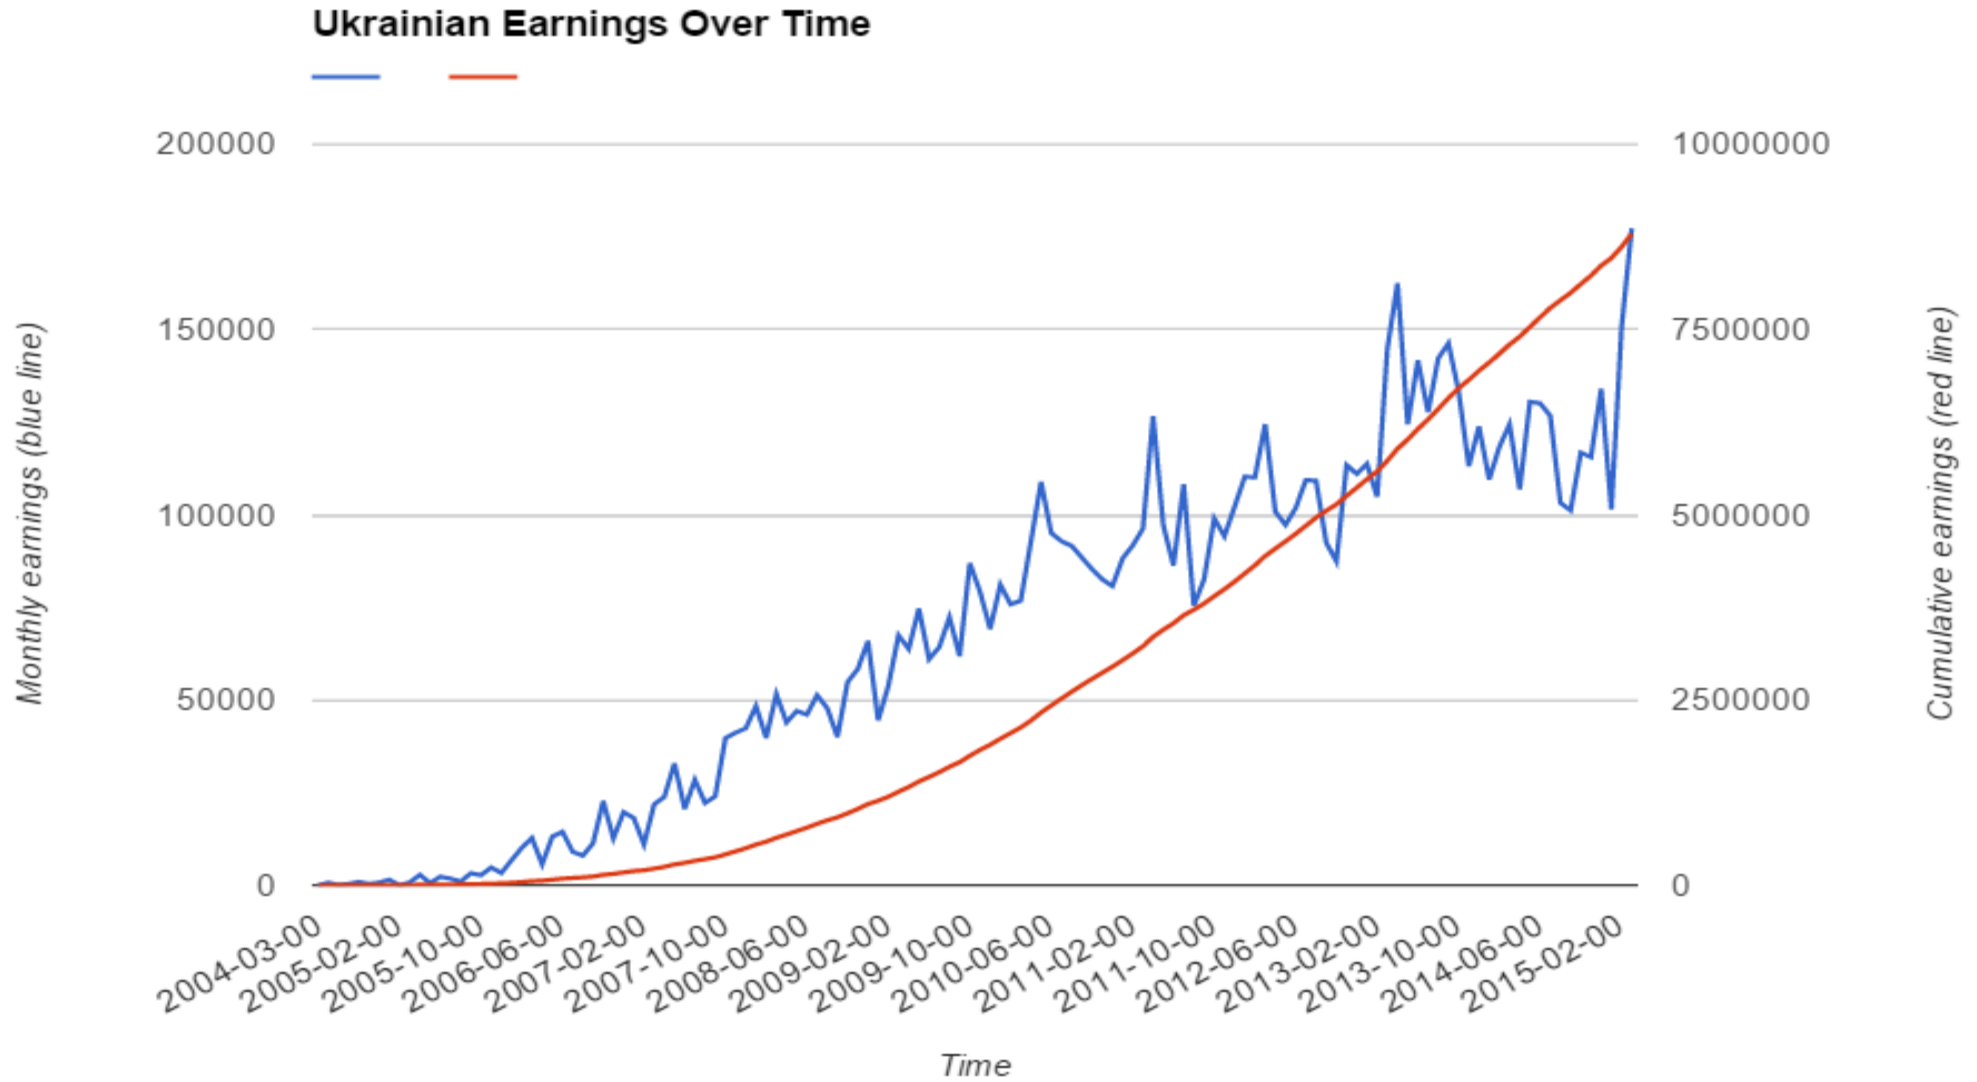

Get Paid and Earn a Five-Star Feedback

- Make sure you get compensation after every phase of the project instead of one big amount after
- You'll feel confident about being compensated, while your employers are assured that you will uphold your end of the bargain

Freelancer.com's Milestone Payments system sets aside funds for payment that can be staggered depending on the project schedule or objectives met.
